Story Jam: Lost Boi

Written by Izkaan - New Dramatic version out!

There was once a little boy called Rodrick, who lived in Oiho. One night, his dad (Bob), went to get the dreaded milk, late at night. There was no milk at home, thus, his baby sister was crying. and, his dad went to get the milk.

When Bob went to get the milk, it was quite a cold night, with some gentle winds. It was very relaxing. However, as he got on the bike, the fuel was concerningly low. Oiho was a huge city, thus, he had to first fuel the bike. However, something terrible happened. The bike ran out of fuel, during the middle of the trip (after dipping into 0 fuel). Thus, he had to get a tow truck to tow his bike to the fuel station. While he was calling contacts for help, things went from bad to worse.

It started to drizzle, which on its own, is not bad. However, by the time the tow-truck showed up, the drizzle had transformed into a monstrous, heavy thunderstorm. Bob heard the sound of heavy rain, slamming on the rooftops of the houses near him. The wind also had dramatically increased, more than any character development in any movie.

The wind had started to become a problem, and it was not safe to tow the bike during such dangerous conditions. Thus, he was stuck. And he was also getting wet in the rain. He would have tried to get a cab/taxi, however, due to the terrible weather, there were no taxis, and all taxis were parked due to terrible floods.

He had to find a place to stay/wait, while waiting for the thunder to subside. He ran to a nearby shop (which was open, full of stuck workers, had AC) and waited in one of those cheap plastic chairs.

While he was waiting, he got bored. He had no internet, and even though he had Mobile Data, it would have cost way too much for him to consider. His son uninstalled most of the things he had, so he was bored. He asked the manager for WIFI and the manager explained there is no free WIFI.

Thus, while waiting in the chair, despite the loud clattering of the workers, the rain slamming into the rooftops, the wind sending clothes to the next level, Bob fell into a deep slumber (sleep).

He woke up to a sound, the sound of traffic honking. But it just sounded off, when he woke up, he was in a creepy basement. He was not tied into the chair, but the doors were locked. He looked around to see if he could see anyone. He went and turned on the lights, and that's when he saw a fat guy called Ross.

Ross worked at neurolink, and he needed a person to test the chip on, however, it was quite dangerous, as many pigs died due to it. They wanted to see if it would work on humans, but since nobody wanted to test it, they resorted to kidnapping a man. They said he had to put the chip in his brain, let it run some tests, and then (if he was alive), he was free to go.

But Bob was not that dumb. He did not want to be one of those fried pigs. He ran for the exit, and considering that Ross was fat, Bob tried to make an escape. He leaped towards the door, and Ross just realized it. Ross was calling for help while Bob tried to break the door and escape. Eventually, Bob went out, and found himself in a funny place.

It was the dreaded "The Slantrooms", that is not the backrooms. Its a rainbow filled, titled, slanted, and massive basement, that according to the leaderboard (which you can see at the beginning), only "GigaChad" had gone through this room.

He had read some articles on "The Slantrooms", and thought it was fake, but now he was in it. Ross laughed and warned him about the dangers, the enemies, the feared susus amogus, and more. Ross said, would you die, or rather die in this?

Bob watched a TikTok about a glitch that allowed you to escape The Slantrooms, and it was simple. You must first, find the chipmunk. The chipmunk lives in this rainbow filled room, and has a 3% chance of spawning, but the place was big. Bob ran in search of a chipmunk, and after exactly 71 minutes of running, walking, and exploring, Bob found a chipmunk. The TikTok claimed that you needed to dab in front if it, and take it hostage, and if you pour 3 chipmunks on top of the susus amogus, you can escape.

Thus, he spent an entire day in this rainbow lit environment, finding chipmunks, he found 7 chipmunks, and cooked some of them for food, as he was getting hungry. He could not sleep, because physics and time in the slantrooms are different. Time is like Antarctica, 6 months for day/night. After collecting enough chipmunks, he wandered in search of the susus amogus. He eventually found the susus amogus which he did not like to see. He threw the chipmunks at the creature, and unlike the TikTok, it did not work! It got annoyed and started chasing him down! Bob was scared, and somehow ended up no-clipping to the backrooms!

And at that moment, Bob heard some traffic noises and woke up from his dream, at that shop. The manager was very cross with him, and demanded 2$ for "Sleeping service", Bob was tired and paid the money, and left home in his car.

He went back home, and Rodrick was very happy to see him! Rodrick was worried to the core that his Dad left him to get the milk! His sister had also stopped crying and had slept, along with his mom. Bob had then proceeded to explain that due to the rain, he was stuck. Rodrick laughed at his story, and after drinking milk, went to sleep.